

Earthquake Insurance Shopping Resources

To make an educated decision about insuring your home against the risk of an earthquake, you'll need to get a few quotes from competing insurers. Read UP's buying tips to get a sense of the dollar amounts and types of coverage you want, write them down on a piece of paper, then call around or use the Internet to get "apples to apples" premium quotes from competing insurance companies. The basic categories are: Dwelling, Contents, Garages, Fences, Pools, Outbuildings, Building Code Compliance, Temporary/Additional Living Expenses.

Your options are very limited so it's much easier than shopping for auto or homeowners coverage. There are only a few companies selling earthquake insurance these days, and some are very selective about who and what they will insure.

Once you've read UP's buying tips and articles and gotten the premium quotes, you can make the right decision for you, your family and your property. Your buying options vary according to:

1. Where your property is located
2. The age of your property
3. The style of construction
4. The company that is currently insuring the property for fire, etc.
5. Whether you own a condominium, mobile home, or are a renter.

Check UP's links to Internet Shopping Resources to find sites that help you get quotes online. The following are the primary options for California property owners:

The California Earthquake Authority: www.earthquakeauthority.com

(877) 797-4300 The CEA is a part-public, part-private company that was created by the Legislature to solve what might have been a temporary period of unavailable, unaffordable quake policies after the 1994 Northridge earthquake. By creating the CEA the legislature changed the EQ insurance marketplace permanently, so we'll never know if the problem would have solved itself naturally over time through competitive forces.

Insurance companies like State Farm, Allstate, Farmers and CSAA that no longer sell their own EQ policies to CA customers are required by law to participate in the CEA. The CEA is managed by a professional staff, but the participating private insurance companies are involved in issuing the policies, collecting premiums and servicing claims.

The CEA is now the only option for many California property owners who want to buy quake coverage. It is working hard to lower its rates, improve its products and give consumers more options while strengthening its claims-paying capacity and finance structure. We recommend getting a quote for a CEA policy before you make your decision.

Arrowhead: www.arrowheadgrp.com 1 (877) 233.9722 Sells "stand-alone" EQ coverage not tied to your property insurance to select customers who meet their guidelines.

Pacific-Select Property Insurance: www.calquake.org 1 (800) 774-1012 Sells "stand-alone" EQ coverage not tied to your property insurance to select customers who meet their guidelines.

GeoVera Insurance: www.geovera.com 1 (800) 324-6020 Sells "stand-alone" EQ insurance.

Other Non-CEA insurers/ The company currently insuring your property. If the company that insures your home now is not a CEA participating company, (Fireman's Fund, Safeco, Chubb e.g.) they must by law offer to sell you EQ coverage — in most cases, a "mini-policy" with very basic, minimal limits.

United Policyholders is a non-profit organization founded in 1991 and dedicated to educating the public on insurance issues and consumer rights. UP publishes educational materials and serves as a resource for individual and business policyholders and residents of communities with insurance problems. UP's Amicus Project provides information to courts of law and to public officials to help enforce and protect policyholders' rights.

The information presented in this publication is for general informational purposes, and should not be taken as legal advice. If you have a specific legal issue or problem, United Policyholders recommends that you consult with an attorney. United Policyholders does not sell insurance or certify, endorse or warrant insurance products or vendors. United Policyholders is not a referral service.